Two dominant hills (570m) of different geological composition (basalt and trachyte rocks). Noticeable, 570 m high conical mountain northwest of Lovosice is due to its massiveness, graceful shape, steep slopes and position above elbe river main Dominant of Lovosice area.

From the geological point of view, Lovoš is formed of basalt rocks. Neighboring smaller hill called Kibička or small Lovoš, is on the contrary of phonolite composition.

Thanks to valuable natural assets (rare fauna and flora) was on the Lovoš and Kybička announced in 1948 a nature reserve with an area of 50 hectares.
